

At locane
we create the technology
platform
for business.

Wherever your business systems
run, we can design,
build, secure and
support your infrastructure and
your people.

The design, build, protection and support of information technology that underpins all organisations is what we do at locane.

We recognise that information technology properly applied can be a significant enabler for an organisation - and when poorly applied becomes just another cost.

We work closely with you to understand your business goals and then apply the right combination of technology to deliver your outcome.

Consulting

locane brings a unique blend of business and technical experience to the table. Our consulting practice is led by two of the company directors who marry business acumen with a deep understanding of technology and how this can be applied to deliver business outcomes.

An effective IT Strategy aligns technology to business outcomes, driving IT to deliver quantifiable benefits for the organisation.

Information security

Information security can impact every area of your business. locane's specialist team brings a holistic and contemporary approach to information security, underpinned by industry best practice frameworks, policy and compliance expertise.

locane's approach to information security is about managing business risk, to ensure security is proportional to the risk for an organisation. This allows security focus to be directed to areas that really matter, while preventing excessive restrictions (and spend) where not warranted.

locane cloud

locane cloud services deliver reliable, secure and cost effective infrastructure that is typically used by our customers as the platform to run their core business systems.

Public cloud

Public cloud service providers deliver the capability to rapidly scale significant IT resources up and down to service peak demand workloads. locane works with the major public cloud providers to incorporate their offerings into practical solutions.

As a service Offerings

locane offers a range of cloud based solutions to deliver critical IT service functions without the associated investment in infrastructure and underlying management complexity. These services can be administered by your in house IT team, or by locane's managed service team.

With most businesses adopting some level of cloud-based services from a growing range of options, locane believes that the 'right' choice can only be made by considering the unique requirements of each organisation.

Managed

locane provides IT managed services that range from responsibility for individual devices or layers of technology, through to the complete IT function. We have mature systems with defined processes to ensure consistent service delivery. Detailed reporting and open communication ensures that our customers can retain visibility, governance and control.

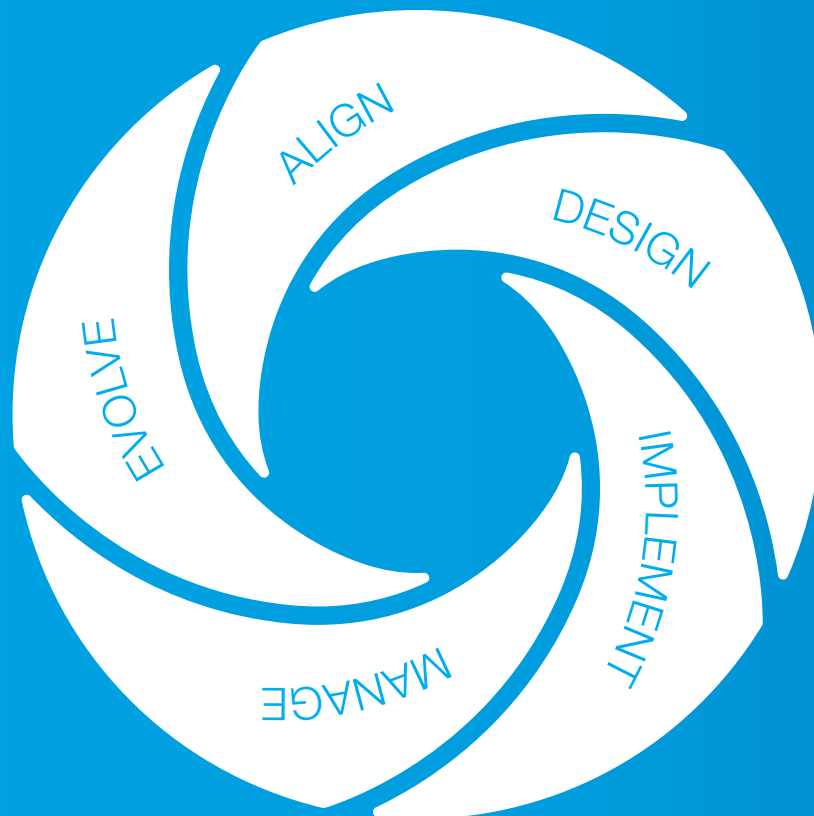

The outsource of core IT service functions has been used by many locane customers to free up staff to focus on activities that deliver greater value to the organisation. This has been an important step in transitioning IT from a cost centre to a business enabler.

Projects

Our expertise spans the integration of all elements of the information technology stack, from the underlying network, storage and server through to virtualisation, most operating systems and a variety of database and utility applications.

Our role as a systems integrator is to bring together the various IT elements and present them as a stable, secure and manageable platform for business
